PETER MANSBRIDGE
Chief Correspondent of CBC Television News

After finishing high school in Ottawa and following a stint in the navy, the extraordinary radio and television journalism career of Peter Mansbridge started in Churchill, Manitoba when he gave a flight announcement for TransAir during a particularly busy moment. Among the assembled crowd at the small airport was the local manager of the CBC affiliate who was impressed by the young man's voice quality and who told him shortly afterwards that he should be in radio. He started as a disc jockey the next night and his career took off from there.

By his own admission, Peter Mansbridge's disc jockey career was not lengthy nor inspiring. He was soon moved to Winnipeg as a regional radio reporter and later to Saskatchewan as a national television correspondent. His next position was in Ottawa as a parliamentary correspondent. The rest of his career is well known to Canadians.

Anchored by Mansbridge since 1980, "Sunday Report" provides valuable supplementary material to "The National" and "The Journal". He became Chief Correspondent for CBC Television News and anchor of "The National" on May 1, 1988.

During his years in television journalism, Peter Mansbridge has given comprehensive coverage to some of the most significant news stories in Canada as well as throughout the world. These stories include election coverage, leadership conventions, Pope John Paul's visits to Canada, royal weddings, international scandals, the exodus of the boat people, and other newsworthy events.

As chief correspondent and anchor of "The National", Canada's highest-rated newscast, Mansbridge heads a team of award-winning regional and specialist reporters and outstanding foreign correspondents. He brings Canadians on-the-spot, live commentary and analysis of national events and provides a Canadian perspective to international stories.

ADRIENNE CLARKSON
Television Journalist and Publisher

Born in Hong Kong of Chinese parents, Adrienne Clarkson came to Canada with her family in 1942 as a refugee. She attended public schools in Ottawa, and later received her Bachelor of Arts with Honours and Master of Arts degrees in English Literature from Trinity College, University of Toronto. From 1961-64, she lived in Paris, attending the Sorbonne's diploma course for the training of teachers of French in foreign countries. In 1988, she received an LL.D. (honoris causa) from Dalhousie University.

From 1963 to 1965, Ms Clarkson was a lecturer in the Department of English, at the University of Toronto.

She returned to Toronto in March 1987 from Paris, where she had been Ontario's Agent General since 1982. There, she established an Ontario government office to promote Ontario business, culture and tourism. The growth of these relations between France and Ontario has been considerable since 1982, with emphasis given to high technology, cultural activity, expanded trade, and the automotive sector.

Until her appointment in 1982 as Agent General, Ms Clarkson was one of the best-known television journalists in Canada. For eighteen consecutive years, she was the star of CBC public affairs programs, "Take Thirty", "Adrienne Clarkson At Large", and "The Fifth Estate". In her long and successful career of over 3,000 television programs, she became known for the treatment of political and economic subjects: she interviewed the Shah of Iran and has done numerous programs on human rights. In Canada, she has won four ACTRA awards as best television journalist for her accounts of the drought in the Sahel, the cost over-runs at the Montreal Olympics, and for excellence and integrity in broadcasting as a whole. Ms Clarkson is the host of the CBC-TV series, "ADRIENNE CLARKSON'S SUMMER FESTIVAL."

Ms Clarkson was the President and Publisher of McClelland & Stewart in 1987-88, and she is presently the Publisher of ADRIENNE CLARKSON BOOKS, inaugurated in 1988, for McClelland & Stewart.
