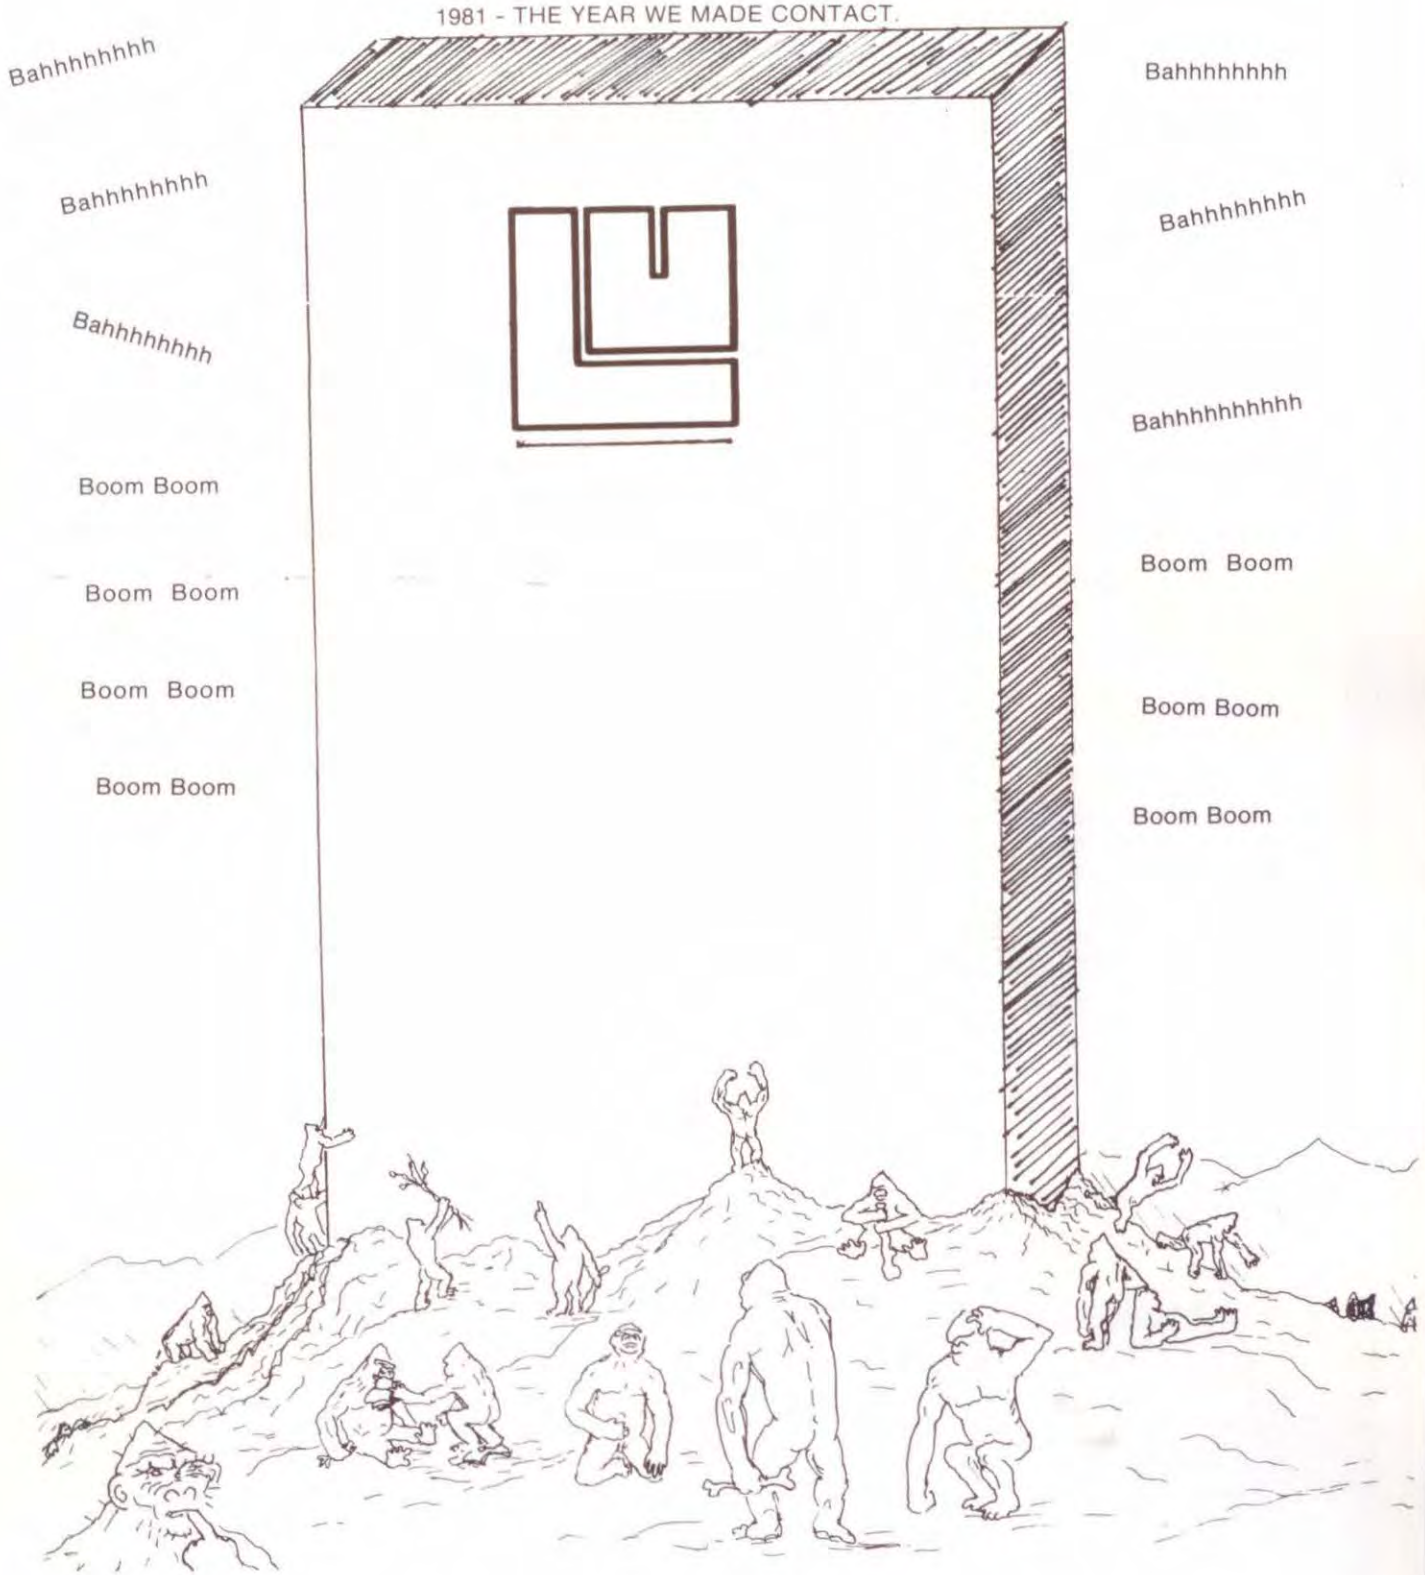
1984-85

On the primordial shores of Lake Tamblyn an assemblage of hominids gathered . . . . . .

1981 - THE YEAR WE MADE CONTACT.



In the centuries that followed the evolution of this motley crew was marked by several events. These events in some cases led to the extinction of some of their numbers while others adapted and evolved in response to their environment.

One of the first events to effect the population of hominids was an infestation of parasitical mites who wreaked havoc on our band of fledglings . . . . . .

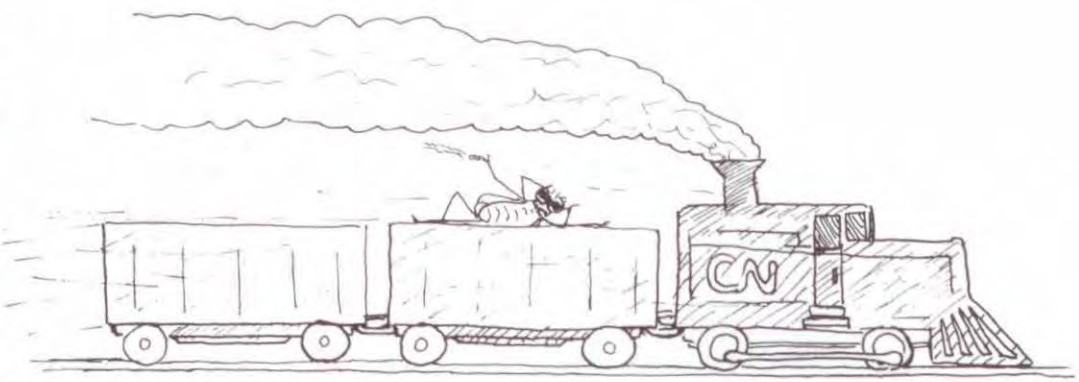
and a certain bug who travelled by train . . . . . .



Undaunted, the population held fast and continued on until the first major event . . . . . .

THE PLATT - MITCHELL OROGENY

.....created the environment and also introduced a new predator to the populace.

FIELD SCHOOL - HELL ON WHEELS !

in search of the wicked rock beast the nomadic hominids travelled far and wide - undaunted by countless perils they pressed on in hopes of catching the wild rock beast. The tribal elders had spoken many times of these beasts telling tales of horror and evil.

Uh! What's a rock?

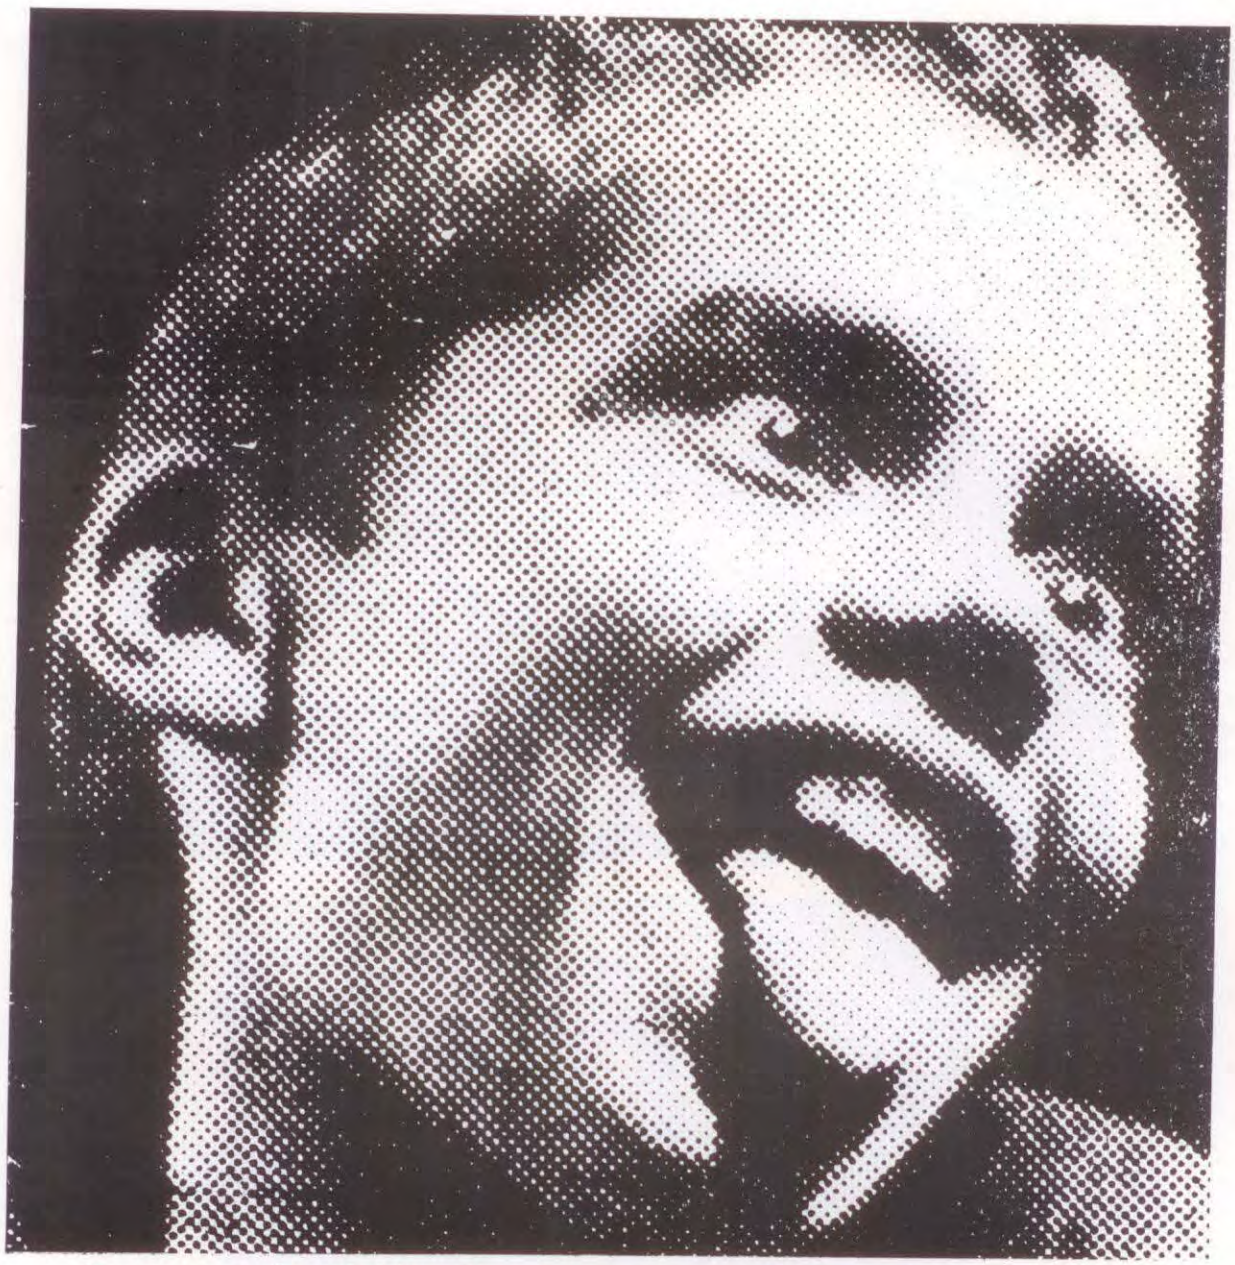
- Then there was the hours upon hours of calculations, drawings with numbers and numbers and more numbers. Longer numbers than anyone had ever seen before or wants to see again.

Yes - you remember THE PIT!

Here is a pictorial representation of the pit we designed in the "Major Problem" . . . . . it looks like we do have a problem!

Patience is a virtue,
Possess it, if you can,
It's never in a woman,
And seldom found in man,
and
If at first you don't succeed,
Try, try, try again.



Guess what! It's final exam time again. Heh heh

O.K. It's exam time, you're so upset, there's so much to do, your thesis, study those case histories, and what about all these geophysics labs and equations? Well that's it you are sure you're going to die... Well here is a handy dandy guide to follow that should help you determine if you're really going to die.....

If you're about to die, you'll begin to notice several terrifying sensations and cosmic revelations as the phenomenal veil is ripped away, revealing, for the first time since the last time you passed away from the organic world, the endless, eternal, unveiled kingdom of the void.

At the same tie, you'll experience a mind-numbing personal cataclysm as you're hurtled at twice the speed of light into a dark and unknown world in which everything seems almost the same as it was before, only more so.

Don't worry about those strange new feelings and cosmic thoughts. They're not important. After all, you're dead! What more can happen? After you've taken rebirth you'll be able to look back on all this and laugh.

These sensations are useful for anticipating your exact moment of passage. And if you've had lots of previous practice, you will be able to use these sensations to call forth a series of special psychological, emotional and instinctive mechanisms, which will help you maintain a sense of equilibrium--albeit false--during the total loss of memory, vision, sensation and identity you'll experience as you are dragged inevitably through the protal of death.

It's so easy to just expel your last breath in a sigh of relief and fall facefirst into your plate of spaghetti and meatballs, in total surrender to the perfect, shining, endless void, which is without objects, states of consciousness, identity, time, space, filled parking lots and those empty weekends you've been struggling to hold onto. When you have finally given up the effort of trying to maintain your organic headbrain personal identity, you'll understand the mystique of peanut butter by the spoonful.

As the veil is lifted, you'll feel several sensations grouped together as a series of symptoms, the first of which is a heavy pressure, like melting into an all-wool union suit while wearing a pair of lead boots. Don't worry about this; you've probably got a good 15 to 90 minutes left to handle any last minute details, and if you have a friend visiting your death bed -- and your friend is so inclined -- you still have time for a wonderfully refreshing foot massage.

The second sensation will be a clammy coldness alternating with sweating, as if your body were burning up. This is just one symptom of hypothermia, in which the body's heat is reduced to lethal levels, Hey, nothing to worry about - passage is still minutes away!

The third sensation is a definite feeling that your body is about to explode. You may actually feel that you've been blown to smithereens and dispersed by the wind. Now, you have something to worry about! Passage is only moments away. Try to relax and think of something pleasant.

The fourth sensation isn't really a sensation - it's a total lack of sensations. Suddenly, although your mind has miraculously opened up and provided a breathtaking and profound view of all creation, it doesn't refer to anything. This vision plus 80 cents will get you a one way ride on a city bus.

In addition to these sensations, there may be other feelings, psychological events, interludes, fugues, or other minor disorders, which ocur prior to passage from the orgainc world to wherever you're going. You might experience a loss of control over you facial muscles, causing an insipid smile or that unoccupied look usually reserved for grad students.

You might periodically lose your hearing, or words and phrases that made sense before might not make the same sense they made before when you understood what they were saying by the words and phrases they might be understood and made sense before when you understood what they meant by what they said to you as you were listening.

There may be a loss of sight or radical changes in your vision vision vision. Your breath might be ragged, particularly is you're getting more than just a foot massage. It is possible that you will find yourself shivering or sweating and having an uncontrollable desire to remove your clothes and walk around. Unless you're expected to recover, this may well be a good idea. Who knows what last minute adventures might be in store for you?

You may feel a lethargic calm descend over you. If you've spent your life on a graduate fellowship or as a government employee, you probably won't notice this. There might be a loss of attention, caused by falling over unconscious on the floor. You may notice that your breathing stopped several minutes ago and that you can't move your limbs. In this case don't bother trying to talk.

When all these symptoms of approaching death have been completed, someone should gently whisper the following words into your ear: "So long sucker, you're on your own."

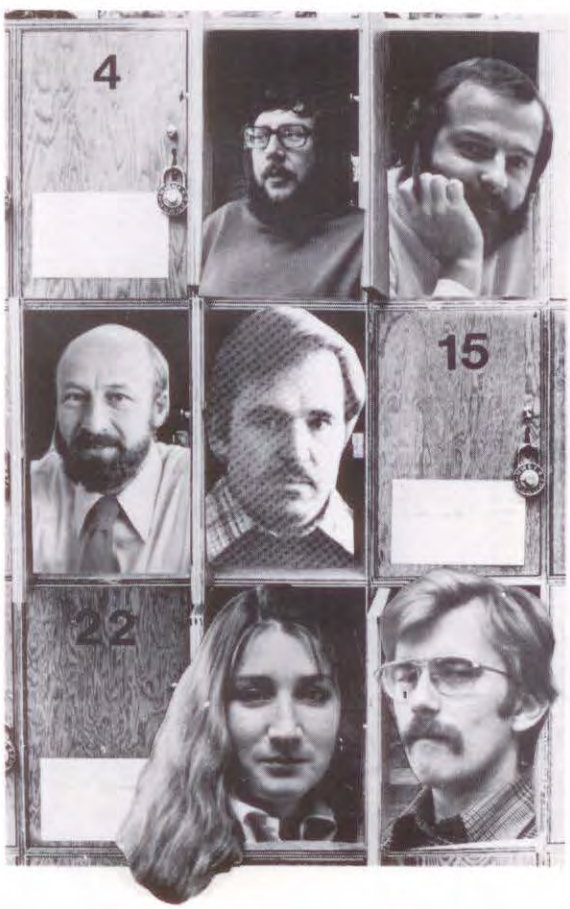
I don't know of any organisms with triangular assholes.	Dr. Phil Fralick
Distribution in, uh, time, ah, and ah, space.	Terry 'Tex' LaChapelle

THE STAFF

To the profs;
We may not have always agreed with you, but once we realized we were right then it was easy to allow you to have your opinions.

(Sorry, no pic for Maureen and Dianne. And thanks Dianne from all the thesis students for all the thin section work.)



A salute to the guys who really do the work, the T.A.'s. We'd like to extend heartfelt thank you's to those who dauntlessly marked our junk and tried to read our scrawls.
Kevin, John, Dave, Dennis and Boris.

LAST WORD

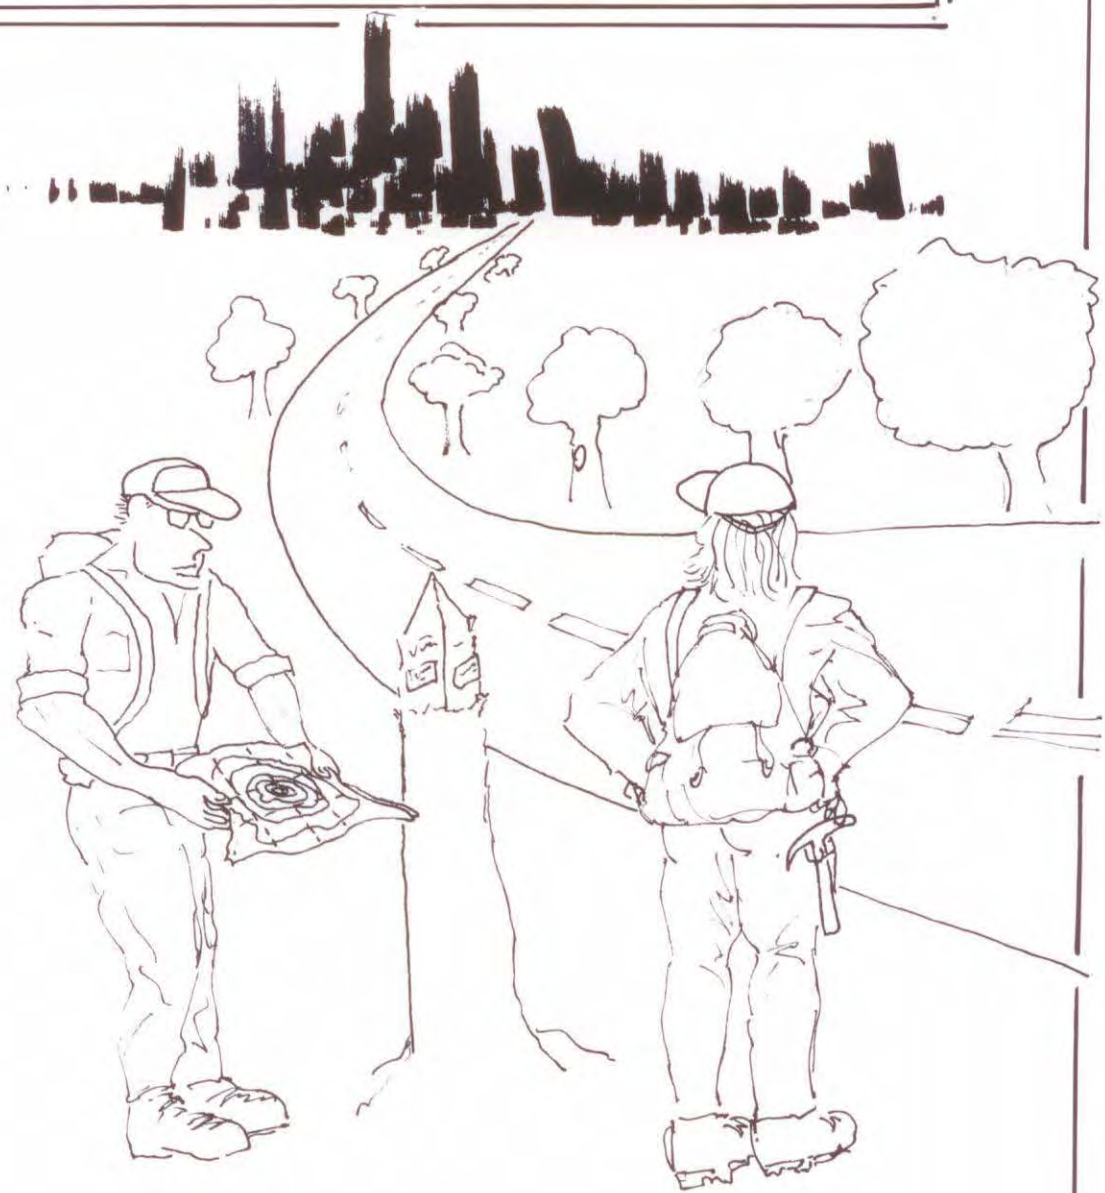
RON BENNETT

The 'Hoot' has finally polished his last section. They may shoot horses, or put them out to pasture, but for technicians, they just send them to Scotland for a holiday.
(Now who's going to give students shit for coats on the desks and keep our profs in line.)

The true test of a University is not the discoveries and inventions which it's professors make or the books they write, but the sort of people its students turn out to be.....



"Those guys from Lakehead - really - this isn't a mag anomally they've staked, it's a population density map!"

EDITORS MESSAGE

The standard format of a yearbook is to include several messages from the faculty etc. I should like to say at this time that had you not noticed it, this is not a traditional yearbook. I have every faith that each of us have memories of person or persons who have greatly infulenced our lives. It is in this spirit that I say at this time that this yearbook is dedicated to all your memories.

It has been assembled in the pursuit of fun and frivolity with no malice intent, however I am aware that some may take offense, if that be the case I suggest that you not read it.

Also, there is a distinct lack of material from the other years due largely to the fact that they didn't get off their butts and submit any material.
