The Virtual Classroom

Don't ever tell the electronic wizards in the Communications Resource Centre that something won't work. Lakehead has an extensive range of programs and courses being delivered via continuing and distance education. With the arrival of videotelephones, the educators and high tech operators were able to create a means to connect off-campus students with the classes and professors on campus.

The virtual classroom concept uses a form of video conferencing combined with real time inter-active computer and audio conferencing. The instructor is able to conduct regular classes on campus while maintaining visual, audible, and electronic contact with students at remote sites. Multipoint conferencing allows individuals at all sites to interact with one another.

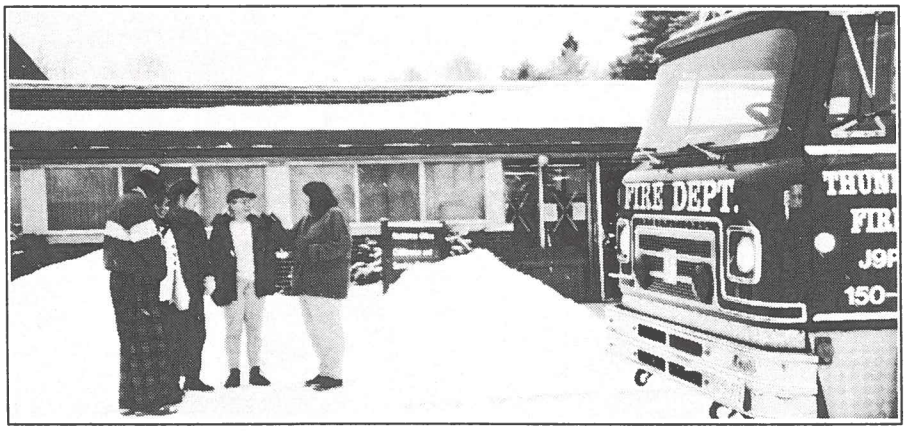

To further enhance the "virtual classroom", Lakehead University has received permission from the Federal Government to establish a micro-wave link to Maclean Hunter Cable TV for broadcast of these classes.

Already LU has one course (Psychology 3401 Behaviour and Drugs given by Mike Moland) that is being broadcast live by means of this step video-conferencing to Kenora and Atikokan.

The new technology will further strengthen LU's ability to meet the post-secondary educational needs of Northwestern Ontario.

Finding their wings: LU business students James Lindsay, Greg Cieslik, Jodi Hazuda, Richard Moen and Jason Stoppel scored top marks at the national Inter-Collegiate Business Competition (ICBC) at Queen's University in January. James Lindsay and Jodi Hazuda placed second in the labour arbitration category. Jason Stoppel and Greg Cieslik presented in the accounting finals and Fiona Gardiner and Richard Moen presented in the marketing finals. Team Co-ordinator and Assistant Professor in the School of Business Gabriella Sacchetti says the student-run ICBC competition is the "Stanley Cup of Canadian business schools". The fact that LU has done so well , she says, is validation of the quality of our students and of our teaching. Not only is the competition fun, it's a marvelous way for students to network and to make career contacts. Special thanks to Peat Marwick Thorne, Chartered Accountants for sponsoring the team.

Not a False Alarm: The Fire Department was called on campus last month to put out a fire in the Bartley Residence. For information about what you should do when you hear a fire alarm, please see page 10.

Holocaust Survivor lectures on campus

Gerda Frieberg, Chair of the Ontario Region of Canadian Jewish Congress, noted lecturer and Holocaust survivor gave a public lecture on campus in January co-sponsored by the Jewish Student's Society and Shaarey Shomayim Congregation.
